The Daily Press.

HONGKONG OFFICE: 14, DES VUEX ROAD CH.
LONDON OFFICE: 131, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Hongkong, 18th September, 1902.

It is now nearly nine months since a vote was taken in the Legislative Council for the erection of the new Clock Tower at the head of Blake Pier and tenders invited for the erection of the edifice. This was before His Excellency the Governor left for England, and no doubt he expected to see the work well on its way toward completion on his return to the Colony. Sir HENRY BLAKE may not improbably want to know why nothing has been done during this long period, after all the preliminaries for getting it started had been successfully accomplished. It is, we know, characteristic of Governments to take no note of time, even by its flight: there is always a to-morrow, and festina lente is a safe motto. When, however, all the difficulties in the way of a work or improvement have been cleared away it is natural to expect that some progress will be made, even though that progress be very slow. Our Public Works Department, however, scarcely seems to move at all, so tortoise-like in its progress. The new Law Courts, the piling for the foundations of which was commenced nearly two years ago, do not even yet show a stone above ground, the piling being still incomplete. It matters nothing that the existing buildings in which the Supreme Court is lodged are miserably inadequate for the purpose, and some of the offices far from sanitary; the Public Works Department cannot be made to quicken its snail's pace, and it will be matter for serious wonderment if the Law Courts are completed and ready for occupation before the end of the first decade of this century. The site for the new Post Office has been acquired, and a handsome price agreed for it, but it may be doubted whether the plans for the building have been prepared or even thought of. Yet it cannot be said that this building is not wanted, or even that there is no hurry for it. Many years ago the necessity for better accommodation was insisted upon by the Press and the public, and successive Postmasters-General have appealed pathetically to the Government for proper accommodation, so that the work of the office might be carried on efficiently. The Chamber of Commerce has also taken up the question on more than one occasion and forcibly represented the scandalous manner in which this important Department has been housed. From time to time, urged thereto by these representations, the Government has adopted makeshift expedients to remedy matters pending the provision of a new Post Office, and has declared its provision a first and early necessity. Will the Public Works Department be permitted to postpone the erection of this urgently needed building to the Greek Kalends?

Why, we venture to ask, does the Government tolerate this trifling, permit these intolerable delays in the construction of the public works when once they are decided upon? Sir HENRY BLAKE, when opening the Blake Pier to public traffic, expressed his sense of the necessity for some sort of shelter for passengers using that, the chief landing-place in the Colony, and we believe it was His Excellency's suggestion that provision should be made for this in the basement of the Clock Tower it was intended to erect at the head of the wharf. The Governor, like several of his predecessors, has also recognised the usefulness of the present Clock Tower, and that on its present site it is no obstruction to traffic. It was most certainly his intention when he left for England that the new Clock Tower should be built without delay in order to provide protection from sun and rain to passengers using the Blake Pier, and that the old tower should be removed to admit of a freer circulation of air in Queen's Road and to abolish a serious obstruction to traffic between that thoroughfare and Pedder's Street. We trust that His Excellency will lose no time in ascertaining the causes of the delay in prosecuting this work, and putting them aside unless of a most serious and insurmountable description. It is possible that the Department is overworked—indeed we feel pretty confident that this is the fact; but admitting this to be the case, it is absolutely no excuse for the failure to get on with necessary public works. If the Public Works Department is undermanned—and there can be little doubt that it is so—additional engineers and architects should be engaged on three or five year terms to carry out these special works, such as the Law Courts, Post Office, and Clock Tower. There would be no difficulty in finding the men, and there need be none about the cost. Engineers are not by any means scarce in Great Britain, and the loss sustained by allowing large sites to lie idle will soon far exceed the amount of their salaries. The waste of public money by this cause involved in the clearing of a large site for the Government Central School (now known as Queen's College) and keeping it idle for some ten years before the erection of the building was a scandal that should never again be repeated. When a building is once decided upon the site should be prepared and the structure erected with the same business-like decision and promptitude shown by a private investor in property. His Excellency the Governor will, we trust, signalise the closing years of his administration by a vigorous endeavour to provide the Colony with the important Public Works above referred to, and will be able to point to them in an advanced stage of erection when the time comes for him to bid farewell to Hongkong. We cannot doubt that Sir HENRY BLAKE takes a lively interest in the erection of these much needed buildings, but there is always a tendency to laissez faire among the officials unless they are stirred into activity either by the Head of the Executive or by indignant and aroused public opinion.

There seems to be a certain amount of misunderstanding as to the date of the meeting of shareholders of the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock. We learn, however, on very good authority that the 8th December next will be the day appointed.

Lady Blake's "At Home" at Government House yesterday was favoured with lovely weather and was attended by a very large number of guests. The music of a band playing in the grounds was much enjoyed. The reception lasted from 4.30 to 6.30 p.m.

Four cases, implicating six persons, are down for hearing at the Criminal Sessions to-day beginning at 10 a.m. These are as follows:—(1) Wing Hoi, unlawfully escaping out of prison; (2) Luk So, U Chai, and Kong Kwai, robbery with violence; (3) Lam Fai Nam, three counts of forgery; (4) Sui P. Lory, uttering a forged bank-note and having forged bank-notes in his possession.

The U. S. transport Iris arrived yesterday from Cavite, P. I.

The French and English mails of the 11th and 16th ult. were delivered in London on the 15th inst.

Rinderpest has broken out in certain villages in the New Territory. The matter will be dealt with at the meeting to-day of the Sanitary Board.

The winner of the King's Prize at Bisley, who had served in the war, was asked by Lord Roberts whether his excellent shooting had not stood him in good stead in South Africa. "I never saw a Boer all the time I was there," he replied.

The body of an unknown male Chinese apparently about 40 years of age, was found on Tuesday night in the nullah at Hill Road, West Point. The base of the skull was fractured, and from all the circumstances the police are of opinion that the deceased was sitting on the edge of the nullah and accidentally slipped over.

The death is announced of M. The Pingang Gazette is informed that the contract for the Forak General Farm for the years 1903-5 has been given to the Selangor millionaire Towkay Loke Yew without calling for tenders in the usual way. It is, says a correspondent, a concession on the part of the Federated Malay States Government which the recipient is fully deserving of for many reasons, one of which is that there is perhaps no other man who has done so much to develop the mining industry in the States of Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang as Towkay Loke Yew, who, it may be added, has lately been to Kelantan on some railway project which he has in view.

An exceptionally large seizure of opium was made in Bangkok on the 4th inst. by Mr. H. G. Lamberton, of the Customs department. The opium was concealed in tins which pretended to contain preserved pineapples. The haul was made on the steamship Neun Tung, and it seems that the nature of the tins was discovered by the commander of the vessel, Captain Schmitt, in the most casual way. One of the tins fell on the deck and was broken, with the result that the opium was scattered around. A search was then made and it was found that while the upper tier of tins contained pineapples the under row was full of opium. The value of the smuggled goods was 3,600 taels, or $12,900. Captain Schmitt received a reward of Tse 4,000.

At Halifax (N. S.), last month, Mr. J. I. Taylor, Canadian Minister of Public Works, in a speech before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, declared that Canadians must no longer see their market slaughtered by American manufacturers and the great trade of the continent carried through American channels. The remedy he proposed was the improvement of the Canadian waterways and a higher tariff. "We must," he said, "transport from West to East through Canadian channels. The country must be united by cheaper transportation and a strong Canadian tariff. The shortest route to the seaboard is destined to be the great carrying highway, not only of the Canadian wheat fields but of the whole American continent. We have a route from Georgian Bay to Liverpool 300 miles shorter than via New York. The Canadian Pacific Railroad and the Grand Trunk must work together to carry that trade via Canadian routes." The Minister stated that Canada would soon have a fast Atlantic line, and declared that Halifax in winter and Quebec in summer were the natural terminals.

A decision by Mr. Kemp at the Magistrate's yesterday in the case of the Indian soldiers who plundered some fruit trees in the grounds of a bungalow in Kowloon seems rather extraordinary. Though the Indians had to get over a hedge surrounding the grounds, the Magistrate decided that they did not know they were trespassing and therefore let them off. This recalls a story of a curious decision at home. Mr. Justice Bowen was trying a case of burglary with a Welsh jury, and it was urged for the defence that the prisoner was in the habit of walking on the house-tops at midnight, and had merely taken off his boots and dropped into the house out of curiosity. In summing up, Bowen said to the jury: "If you believe that the prisoner considers the house-tops the proper place for an evening stroll, and that the desire to inspect the inside of the houses was but a natural and excusable curiosity, you will acquit him and will approve his conduct in showing so much consideration as to take off his boots for fear of disturbing the sleepers." The irony was unmarked, the jury took him seriously, and acquitted the prisoner. He never tried the ironical vein again.

The annual report of the Postmaster-General shows that the large total of £387,000 was found in letters undelivered during the past year. The undelivered letters, totaled no less than 10,000,000, while the delivered missives amounted to 2,451,500,000, an average of 58.1 for each person in the United Kingdom.

He has recently obtained Bishop Corfe's consent to his spending a period of some years in England.

The following from a Honolulu paper reads rather curiously:—"Prince Cupid arrived on the Claudine for a tour of the islands. His coming was preceded by letters to friends in which the Prince is said to have expressed his willingness to accept the nomination for Congress if offered him." The context shows that Cupid is a native noble, not the Roman deity.

Concluding its obituary notice on the late Mr. Alexander Michie, the Times says:—"His genial disposition and conversational powers secured him friends wherever he went, just as his enormous power of work and intellectual gifts gained for him the confidence and esteem of his employers. Literary style seemed born in him, so instinctively did it come to him, and though his criticisms of men and things were apt to be severe, they were never narrow or personal."

The official Gazette of French Indo-China gave the other day particulars of the curriculum of the native School of Medicine. A certain number of Siamese and Chinese, not French subjects or protégés, are eligible to be appointed bursars of this School. These pupils will be selected by the representatives of France in Siam and China, who will have to secure themselves that the candidates presented by them have a sufficient knowledge of the French language and are likely to profit by the course of studies in the School of Medicine.

By last reports, says the Straits Times, the kidnapped Rajah of Patani was enjoying good health, the rumors of his having been poisoned proving quite untrue. He is incarcerated at the town of Pitaneok, the capital of the Manthou province of the same name. Pitaneok is situated on the Mueang River about 200 miles north of Bangkok. Owing to the current, and the twists and shallows in the river, and the difficulties of navigation, however, it takes about twenty days to travel there by steam-launch from the capital.

In the year 1901-02 Burma imported from Siam goods to the value of Rs. 13,424, and exported goods to Siam to the value of Rs. 1,77,940. Of the export to Siam rice represents a value of Rs. 1,31,819, and rice bran Rs. 8,620. This is the coast trade only and does not include the very much larger trade over the frontier. The rice, of course, goes down to the Peninsula. The trade is carried on chiefly by sailing craft. Twenty-four sailing vessels entered Burmese ports from Siam during the year, and ten cleared at Burmese ports for Siam.

A correspondent writes to the following effect:—"Indications are not wanting that there is to be a second crop of liiches this year, the trees in the interior having again flowered. As a consequence, many wild rumors are in circulation, and pestilence, rebellion, and war are foretold. A parallel is pointed to in the case of the Taiping Rebellion, which was preceded by a double crop of liiches. Our correspondent concluded by saying that signs of the times point to a great rebellion in China, and adds that complications between Russia, France, England, and Japan are inevitable."

MACAO AND ARMS-SMUGGLING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

Hongkong, 16th September.
SIR,—In your issue of the 7th ult. you published a letter from the Portuguese Consul-General in this Colony to the effect that the rumour which was then current that large quantities of arms had been imported into Macao for the interior of China was untrue and had no foundation whatever, as enquiries made by the Macao Government into the matter had failed to elicit any support of the said rumour. I do not know whether the public mind was satisfied after that, but the article you publish in your issue of yesterday, under the heading of "Alleged Arms-Smuggling," seems to point to the fact that the rumour had some raison d'être, even if untrue. It also disposes of the belief entertained by some people that the rumour was circulated maliciously with the intention of getting the Macao authorities into trouble. Thanking you in anticipation for the insertion of these lines,—Yours, &c.

SUPREME COURT.

Wednesday, 17th September.

IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

BEFORE HIS HONOUR W. MERRI GOODMAN (CJ. JUSTICE).

LEUBA FREEMAN & J. ULLMANN AND CO.
This was a motion for an interim injunction to restrain the defendants from infringing the plaintiffs' trade-marks and from using devices which would pass off their watches as being the plaintiffs'. Mr. M. W. Slade, barrister-at-law (instructed by Mr. J. Hastings of Messrs. Deacon & Hastings, solicitors), appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. E. H. Sharp, K.C., barrister-at-law (instructed by Mr. C. D. Wilkinson of Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist, solicitors), appeared for the defendants.
Mr. Slade, in opening the case, stated that the plaintiffs, whose local agents are Messrs. Gaupp & Co., last year purchased from the firm of Messrs. Borot & Co. a series of trade-marks for a sum of £3,700. These trade-marks were in various forms but they all contained the Chinese words Po-wai and Yee-nah. The actual marks were of course of different dates, they having been brought into use at different times, but in the oldest form which was still in use the words Po-wai and Yee-nah were contained in fancy circular borders, and in these forms they had been in use in China for no less than 37 years—since 1815. The registry of these marks was made in the Swiss Courts in 1882 and it was then stated that they had been in use in China for 50 years. It was on evidence that these two names in connection with watches had acquired a very high reputation in China and had been known for a large number of years as the watches manufactured by the plaintiffs and their predecessors. It was also on evidence that plaintiff's business had been falling off in consequence of cheap imitations of their watches being put on the market. Only very recently had the plaintiffs discovered, through the agents here in Hongkong, the sources—or one of the sources—of these cheap imitations, and accordingly they had taken these proceedings. With regard to the word Po-wai, they did not suggest that the defendants had put that name upon any watches. What they had done was to sell watches exactly similar to the genuine Po-wai watches sold by the plaintiffs and cause to be placed on these watches a circular scalloped border in very close imitation of the Po-wai mark, but with the word Po-wai omitted. The result of that was that they sold these watches to Chinese dealers in Canton and elsewhere in China and the dealer was enabled to engrave upon the blank space left for him—purposely left for him—the characters Po-wai, and as soon as that was done you had a watch exactly imitating the genuine Po-wai watch. With regard to the Yee-nah watches, it was admitted by the defendants that they used trade-marks with the name Yee-nah.
Mr. Sharp—We claim we have a right to do so.
Mr. Slade said that claim was of a very indefinite kind. The title to the use of Yee-nah set in a scalloped circle was beyond all cavil or doubt the right of the plaintiffs. Mr. E. H. Bernstein of the defendant firm stated, in his affidavit that from information he had received from the manager of his firm's business in Shanghai, and as he well believed, the name Yee-nah was registered by his firm in Switzerland many years ago, and that it had been agreed by the two firms not to raise any objection to the common use of the mark Yee-nah. The plaintiff held that they were solely entitled to the mark Yee-nah but were not at the present time in a position to prove it. They knew now that another firm, the Hadesker Company, were using almost similar characters, pronounced Yee-nah. They learned that only two or three days ago. Even assuming that they had a right to use the word Yee-nah, it could not be suggested that the defendants had a right to use Yee-nah in the plaintiffs' trade-marks. He asked His Lordship to restrain the defendants from selling watches made up and marked with a mark, a imitation of the plaintiffs, a mark, a circular fancy border which enabled the customers to complete the forgery and produce an exact imitation of the Po-wai watches; also from using this colourable imitation of the scalloped circular border in which the characters Yee-nah were contained.
Mr. Sharp, K.C., in opening the debate for the defence, said the plaintiffs' right to use the characters Po-wai was unquestioned, but the defendants' defence, as being used, them, there had been a suggestion that some manufacturer in Switzerland who made some of their watches made the watch that had been put in by the other side fraudulently marked Po-wai; they denied that they marked it so or saw the watch marked Po-wai. That watch was bought not from them but from Hadesker. As to the circular borders on the watches, they had a perfect right to make these circles. They claimed that they had a right by common law as well as by a patent which they had as old as the plaintiffs' and also by an express agreement made by the plaintiffs some years ago; and they claimed the right to use the Yee-nah mark as they had used it. The defendants were willing to give an account of all such watches sold from now until this action was ended but submitted confidently that it would be grossly improper that they should be enjoined from selling these watches, meaning that they had only two watches which they used. The Yee-nah watches, they used more than the other. The granting of an interim injunction would mean shutting up their shop.
His Lordship said he should have to be satisfied that the plaintiffs had reasonable ground for saying that the circular border was an essential part of the trade-mark.
Mr. Sharp went on to say that the three grounds to be taken into account in considering the motion for interim injunction, were whether the defendant had infringed, whether the plaintiff was exclusively entitled, and whether the mark was such as the Court could protect as a trade-mark. The defendants contended with regard to both the Yee-nah and the circle without the characters, that these were in common use. They denied the plaintiff's exclusive right. They also held that there must be a great amount of proof in the facts. He would not give judgment now, but his present opinion was that if the defendants would give an undertaking not to allow any more of these watches to be sold that were exact imitations of the trade-mark minus the Po-wai, he thought he should not be inclined to any further. Possibly at the trial it might work out that the defendants would be able to show the average number of watches they would have sold and if it turned out that they had a right to the watches the plaintiffs would have to pay them damages; on the other hand, the injunction would be granted if it turned out that the plaintiffs were the prior watch, which he was very much inclined to think it was. He had had a large experience in connection with trade-marks in the Colony during the last 12 years, and recollected most distinctly the amount of dodging that went on. One firm, he remembered, applied for no less than 78 marks that brought things to a climax. It showed that there had been an idea abroad at one time that it was a good thing to have as many marks as possible, as they might come in useful some time. Mr. Sharp asked his Lordship whether it would not be alleged that the owner of a trade-mark, honestly used, was not liable for other people's dishonest use? His Lordship said that hardly applied here. Supposing, for instance, that a man made a sauce similar in all respects to Lee & Perrins' and put it in a bottle with wrapper and everything complete, leaving a blank for the signature? Mr. Sharp said that would be an infringement under the Lee & Perrins. His Lordship remarked that the name would be the main thing in the trade-mark. Whoever it was who made the second watch deliberately copied the first, with the intention of enabling that article to be carried out. He thought the plaintiffs must have been the earlier one because the other side's was a cheaper watch. You did not find people making a better imitation. Mr. Sharp said it might be that those watches were made by the same maker and that both had an equal right. His Lordship stated that he was of opinion that the defendants should undertake not to sell or part with any watches of the pattern bearing the trade-mark similar to the P. was but minus the character P. was, so that they keep an account of the sales of watches bearing the mark Ye-nah with scalloped circular border. The question of costs would be deferred till the trial. Parties acquiesced in this arrangement and it was agreed to draft an order and submit it to his Lordship in Chambers to-day for adjustment. The Court adjourned.

POLICE COURT.

Wednesday, 17th September.

BEFORE MR. F. A. HAZELAND (POLICE MAGISTRATE).

UNFIT FOR HUMAN FOOD.

Kuan Yuen, comprador, 4, Cochran Street, was summoned by R. McEwen, inspector of markets, for exposing for sale 288 tins containing articles of food unfit for human consumption, and two bags of sugar in the same condition. The defendant pleaded not guilty. His Worship examined one of the tins, and appeared to be convinced that the condition of the contents was not over-stated in the charge. The goods were ordered to be destroyed, and the case will come on for hearing on the 24th.

ALLEGED EMBROIDERY.

Yan Sin and Tan Yan, respectively a foramen carpenter and clerk employed by Mok Kong, contractor, 46, Queen's Road West, were each charged with embezzling $524.40, the monies of their employer. They pleaded not guilty. From the evidence it transpired that the defendants, who were arrested on warrants by Sergeant Kerr, collected the money from Mr. C. H. Warren, building contractor, but failed to hand it over to Mok Kong, to whom it was owing by Mr. Warren for work done. The case was withdrawn.

BEFORE MR. J. H. KEMP (ACTING POLICE MAGISTRATE).

ARMED ROBBERY.

A coolie was remanded on a charge of being concerned in an armed robbery at No. 6, Kau U Road, at six o'clock on Tuesday morning. Kau U Road, a street inhabited entirely by Chinese, and is reached from Queen's Road. At the time stated, three men, one of them since identified as the defendant, entered a woman's house there for the purpose of robbery. They threatened her with a chopper, and to still her cries struck her on the face with the flat side of the weapon, afterwards gagging her. This done, they ransacked the house and denuded with jewelry and clothing to the total value of $58. The woman succeeded in freeing herself, and reported the occurrence to the police. A watch was set on the Canton Road, and the defendant was pointed out by the robbed woman as he was making his way on board the Hanlon. Since then the police have made two more arrests, and all three prisoners will be brought up on the 25th inst.

A RICKSHA GRIEVANCE.

P. T. Crisp, inspector of buildings, summoned a Kowloon ricksha-coolie for refusing legal hire. The complainant, who lives at 12, Salisbury Avenue, said that his "boy" to get a ricksha. The "boy" met the defendant, and told him his master wanted a ricksha, and that he was to come along. The defendant refused, and struck the "boy". The charge was dismissed.

CHARGE AGAINST INDIAN SOLDIERS.

Two Indian soldiers in the H.K.S.H.A. were charged by G. T. Lutton with trespassing on the grounds of the "Pagoda Bungalow," Kowloon, the residence of the complainant, for the purpose of committing a felony. A plea of not guilty was tendered by each of the accused. The complainant told the Magistrate that he found the men in his garden picking fruit, one perched on a fruit tree and the other standing at the foot of it. The defendants had no business there, as the grounds were private. The defendants said they were ignorant of the fact that they were trespassing, and when they realised their mistake offered to return the fruit to the complainant, who, however, detained them and sent for the police. A tender from the defendant went into the witness-box and testified to the good character of the accused, who were discharged with a caution, his Worship deeming it expedient that a notice in Hindustani should be exhibited at the bungalow intimating that the grounds were private and that trespassers would be prosecuted.

London, 2nd September.

President Roosevelt in a speech delivered at Proctor, Vermont, said that the Monroe Doctrine was a doctrine of peace, and to secure the chance of the United States developing peacefully on its own lines; but that doctrine would be respected only as long as the United States had a first-class and efficient navy. He concluded: "It would be a shame to us if we asserted the doctrine and if the assertion was called in question, we could only show that we had made an idle boast, and were unprepared to back words by deeds."

The half-yearly ordinary meeting of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company was held at the town office, Collyer Quay, Singapore, yesterday at noon. The directors report for the half-year ended June 30th last notes that:—

They have also to express their great grief at the death, on 28th June last, at Brechin, of Mr. Thomas Scott, who for many years closely watched over the interests and successfully guided the course of this Company.

REVIEWS.

Tommy Cornstalk. By J. H. M. ABBOTT.

London and Bombay, Longmans, Green & Co.

Tommy Cornstalk is the Australian equivalent of our Tommy Atkins. The author, who is a late corporal in the First Australian Horse, describes his book as "being some account of the less notable features of the South African War from the point of view of the Australian ranks." In the preface he feels constrained to offer an apology and an explanation for adding to the flood of war literature which has swept the market. Mr. Abbott, however, has no call to act the apologist, as every one must admit who reads his Tommy Cornstalk. And as a matter of fact there is truth in the author's contention that, notwithstanding the amount of literature which has been written round about him, the Australian soldier has not yet had his say. We would only add the comment that the Australian volunteers in South Africa ought to be happy in the possession of such a gifted writer as Mr. Abbott to be their mouthpiece. The books written about the war have in all conscience been of varied complexion in their treatment of the subject and as regards the standpoint of the different writers, so much so that one might, be pardoned for concluding that one was familiar with every aspect that it was possible for a writer to treat of; it is for that reason, perhaps, that one is at first struck with the pristine freshness which pervades Mr. Abbott's book and then carried away by the vigour and versatility of the writer. "As a soldier Tommy Cornstalk differs considerably from his cousin Tommy Atkins," may be taken as the text of Mr. Abbott's essay. It is the lesson drawn from that difference of training and method that he seeks to inculcate. Atkins in South Africa fought under conditions that were in a broad sense foreign to the style of warfare for which he had been laboriously prepared. Cornstalk found himself when on the field in much the same environment as his beloved Bush afforded and hence was able to give battle to the Boer on more equal terms than the regular, to meet with with a little and pit his hardy frame, the shooting and splendid horsemanship successfully against those admirable attributes which went to make our foe in South Africa an irregular fighting force of such efficiency. Mr. Abbott's views and comments upon South Africa and all heres there are distinctly valuable and always interesting. For richness and fertility he considers the country to be a "good country"—better far even than the general run of Africaanders give it credit for being. The field he compares to a field that has lain fallow without getting a chance of showing what it can do. It is not unnatural that the next thing which should engage the attention of Cornstalk, after the country, is the individual equipment of cavalry on the march. His remarks are so terse and so much to the point that one is sorry for inability to quote them at length. In effect he plumps for the pack-horse. He says:—

"It is a fair estimate, and well within the mark, to assume that one pack horse could carry the more urgently required effects of four men—that is to say, one weight-carrier to each section. Not all the rations, and horse-feed, and other things which the man may require on a march of many weeks, but the things which he cannot do without at night, and hardly needs in the day-time, and which are only a hindrance to his marching and fighting ability. There would be then, instead of four, five horses in each section—four to carry men, and one to carry baggage. When cavalry are dismounted for skirmishing, one man of every four—the horse-holder, or number three—is out of action. It is not very much more difficult to look after five horses than four. In work where there is a probability of being under fire, such as scouting or reconnoitring, the pack-leader might be left behind. There would be fewer men in the line of scouts, but the men who were there would be lighter, able to travel farther and faster with their reduced equipment than they are at present, and possessed of considerably more dash—the great essential of a successful scout."

As for the general plan of the book, it is arranged in a sort of chronological order that brings the various exigencies of a soldier's life into natural sequence. The March, the Kopje, the Outpost, the Bivouac, the Battle, the Hospital—and so on. In describing his fortunes by flood and field, Mr. Abbott wields an entrancing pen. His sketches of various types met with on active service are keen as well as picturesque; his depictions of the lighter side of camp life are eminently noteworthy, written as it is by a soldier whose mental view has not been cribbed by the influences of a regulation military training and who is prone to say what he thinks, untrammelled by disciplinary restraint. Tommy Cornstalk should be widely read. It is to be had at Messrs. Kelly & Walsh.

The Wooting of Grey Eyes; and Other Stories.

By RICCARDO STEPHENS. London, John Murray.

This book of stories, of which the one with the above name is the most considerable, shows the author to be possessed of versatility and some degree of dramatic power. The Wooting of Grey Eyes is an attractive tale, inclining to the imaginative type, but having a pretty strand of love-making running through it. The woe of "Grey Eyes" finds himself suddenly in the position of heir to an unexpected estate and on going to take possession of his birthright is confronted with the heroine and straightway falls in love with her. Benazir is much the same fashion as a hero of modern romance on a certain notable occasion became enamoured of a lilac sunbonnet—or the wearer of it. Despite uncounted in parts, the story is, entertaining. Of the shorter sketches, The Little General, and Brummer Dees are distinctly good, and there is not a dull one among them. Messrs. Kelly & Walsh have the book on sale.

THE NEW HEBRIDES.

The Territory of Weihaui. By C. E. BAUCE.

MIFORD. Published by Messrs. Kelly &amp; Walsh, Ltd.

This is a most attractive little handbook, printed in clear type and well illustrated with pen and ink sketches and half-tone blocks, of the British possession in Shantung. The purpose of the author is that the book may serve as a descriptive guide and handbook of Weihaui, and he has certainly produced a very handy and a very readable little volume which will prove most useful to those who visit the port. The aspect of Weihaui has changed considerably since Admiral Ting fought his last fight under its hills, a description of which is recorded, as well as a concise and interesting account of the creation and progress of the 1st Chinese Regiment. The illustrations give an idea of the beauty of some of the local scenery whilst the writer has divided the territory into five sections, each of which he fully describes. Various quotations are given in support of the author's own conclusions, as to the importance of its future as a northern naval station for the British fleet, whilst at the same time serving as a popular health resort for the Shanghai community. Under the administration of its new Commissioner it will no doubt develop commercially, though it cannot do so rapidly owing to its rivals north and south in Chefoo and Tientsin, and the not very promising Chinese territory adjoining.

VERMOUTH.

There are in vermouth the essences of at least twelve aromatic plants and the alkaloids of thirteen, all more or less poisonous except when taken in weak infusions. The meadow sweet, so delightful to the olfactory sense, is used for its bouquet, and is rich in prussic acid. Its poisons, for it is a poison-magazine in the hands of the liquor-distiller, give rise to epileptic convulsions and spasms of the heart that may rapidly prove fatal. The studies made by Doctor Laborde of the effects of vermouth and bitters may be thus summarised. Drinkers of these intoxicants suffered from vertigo, trembling of the members, anorexia (loss of appetite), alcoholic dyspepsia, and epileptoid attacks. The worst attacks were due to the addition of winter-green essence and salicylate of methyl, which brought on tetanus. The ingredients in some bitters were calamus aromaticus, grey chincona, cardamom, aloes, and bitter orange. A bitter containing them is greatly imbibed in petis verres (liquorous glasses) by workmen in the south-eastern districts of Paris, where vermouth first appeared. Piedmontese and Savoyards congregating in that part of the town and liking to favour their poor wines with the aromatic plants of their native mountains. A workman who drinks from twelve to fifteen or twenty petis verres a day of bitters with a basis of spirits, is very soon wrecked. The only basis next by manufacturers, because the one most sure to keep, is alcohol. It is also most grateful as a pick-me-up to a coarse or a spoilt palate, because, first, for the spirits and, secondly, for their soluble power, the alkaloids held in solution taste stronger than those that are scarcely dissolved. A few years ago servants of the Orleans Railway Company were suddenly stricken, as if by an epidemic, with paralysis of the legs, which, in spite of energetic treatment, disabled them for some time. When cured and again engaged in their habitual tasks, they were relaxed. The source of the evil lay in bitters.

COAL CONSUMPTION.

"Chief Engineer" contributes to the journal of the Royal United Service Institution an article on coal economy which possesses several features of general interest. The relations between high speed and cruising speed, between normal coal consumption and radius of action, are points which must be studied with the greatest care, not only by engineers, but also by executive officers. The writer of the article referred to is evidently of opinion that coal is wasted in the British Navy, and it is possible that the restrictions he would impose might prove anything but popular amongst engineer officers already overworked and harassed. So far, our chief engineers have virtually enjoyed a free hand in coal consumption. There has been no sort of stint, no real effort on the part of the Admiralty to question the right of one engineer to burn more coal than another.
In our squadrons, it is true, the coal consumption of each ship is usually signalled once a week, and on Sunday-mornings; but an outlay of an extra hundred tons, more or less, is seldom objected to by the Admiralty, unless in the rare instances when he finds himself in danger of running short of fuel when cruising. "Chief Engineer" does well to point out that the radius of action of His Majesty's ships is much exaggerated in most of the publications upon which, critics usually rely.
Brace's Annual, for example, is conspicuously inaccurate in this matter, and so, we fear, are all the naval hand-books. Compilers of these tables, says "Chief Engineer," take it for granted that half a ton of coal will propel a ship 10 knots at 10 knots speed, regardless of tonnage. Thus we find the cruisers Medusa and Orlando credited with the same radius of action, which assertion brings a smile to the lip of the expert. Again (we quote another instance), the Archer class of cruiser is usually credited with a radius of 7, 00 miles at 10 knots speed. This is one of the most economical types of cruiser in our Navy, but, says "Chief Engineer," they only steam about 10 knots per ton of coal for all purposes, which would reduce the radius of action by nearly one-half. It is precisely this question of "all purposes" which is the crux of the matter. These auxiliary engines run away with far more coal than is generally supposed by executive officers. As the speed of a ship increases, there is a constant and slightly increasing drain upon the fuel for auxiliary purposes, which, in the course of a long passage, produces a marked effect, in some ships more than in others. The feed-water for the boilers is a serious item in the new cruisers, especially in those fitted with Belleville's; the steering engine is constantly in use; the electric light is worked day and night in many parts of a warship, and great indeed is the comfort derived from it. Then, too, there are ventilating fans to be worked, drinking water to be distilled, ash-hoists, ammunition-hoists, &c., to be worked by the auxiliary engines which tend to reduce the men of much hand labour. In ordinary times some of the auxiliary engines might, no doubt, be allowed to rest, and in war it seems very probable that the strictest economy in the matter of fuel may often have to be observed. "Chief Engineer" offers some very interesting, though highly technical suggestions, upon the relations between auxiliary consumption and cruising speeds. The modern third-class cruiser is designed for 7,000 horse-power, with a maximum speed of 20 knots, whilst the old-fashioned cruiser had about 3,500 horse-power and a speed of 18 knots. Under natural draught, these speeds fall to 18 and 15 knots respectively, and the horse-power to 5,000 and 3,500. The coal consumption, as regards the main engines, naturally tends to increase with the increase of horse-power; but one effect of this change in class of modern cruiser will have a higher economical speed for cruising, which is an important matter for the purpose of commerce protection.
Also, we learn, "the greater the tonnage of a cruiser, the higher should be her cruising speed, because the daily consumption of coal for purposes other than the driving of main engines of large cruisers is much larger in proportion to the power developed than in small ones." But against this it may be said that a cruiser of 4,000 tons will be able to keep the sea, cruising at economical speed, much longer than a cruiser of 7,000 tons. If so, where is the advantage of greater tonnage, as regards consumption?
"Chief Engineer" proceeds to draw a valuable comparison between the coal consumption of two cruisers of the third-class over the whole period of commission. The modern cruiser, "P," was 4,906 tons under way, steamed 48,014 knots at an average speed of 10 knots, and burnt during her commission 14,263 tons of coal. The older ship, "Q," steamed for 5,449 hours, covered 51,244 knots at an average speed of 9.3 knots, and burnt only 8,632 tons of coal. The distance steamed, it will be noticed, differed by about 2,000 miles, but the difference in the coal consumption was enormous, and is accounted for in detail by "Chief Engineer" by the greater consumption of the modern ship in the use of her auxiliary engines. The modern cruiser we imagine to have been fitted with Belleville's, since she used 5,024 tons of feed-water as compared with 1,634 tons by the older ship. Without wearying our readers with a further mass of figures, it will suffice to say that "P" covered 3.4 knots for each ton of coal burnt for all purposes, as against 6.3 knots covered by the old ship, "Q." This difference is very remarkable, and deserves the attention of the members of the Boiler Committee. The enormous difference in the coal consumption of the vessels is termed "the price of speed," but the actual cruising speeds only differed by 7 of a knot, so that it appears impossible to justify the introduction of water-tube boilers as regards consumption of fuel.
"Chief Engineer" seems to argue that the increase of consumption would be nearly as startling in the case of a modern cruiser fitted with Scotch boilers and designed for large horse-power. The net gain is an increase of 34 knots at full-power, obtained by the enormous outlay in coal, worth about £3,800 during a commission. It may be said that speed is worth any price, but this gives us a fair notion of what speed is actually costing us. We hazarded the opinion that cruiser "P" was probably fitted with Belleville boilers, but "Chief Engineer" mentions at the tail end of his article that she was fitted with Express boilers, which type is a French adaptation of the large tube Thornycroft.

The comparison between the coal consumption of the two cruisers is not exact, although of great value and interest. The older ship was under steam for 500 hours longer than the modern cruiser, which tends to the disadvantage of the former. "Chief Engineer" shows the superiority of the modern cruiser in protection, speed, &c., but the relative loss of coal, he asserts, "should be almost, if not entirely, disregarded." How this is to be effected we are not clearly told, except that the proposal is made that to encourage economy an annual return should be issued by the Admiralty, somewhat similar to the prize-firing returns.
The ships should be arranged on a tonnage basis in their several classes and coal consumption shown in a tabular statement designed to bring honour and glory to the thrifty and shame to the extravagant engineer. "Chief Engineer" is probably quite right in saying that the individual efforts of engineer officers to effect economy in coal consumption deserve more official recognition, for the matter, after all, is very important, and will be even more vital in time of war, when every delay for the purpose of refuelling may cost the country a number of merchant ships.—Naval and Military Record.

MEN-OF-WAR LOST SINCE JANUARY, 1901.

The official list of men-of-war lost, which was recently published, was incomplete, so that an amended list, bringing the losses up to date may be of interest.

Great Britain has lost—

1. The Shylde, second class-cruiser, which was driven ashore in Lumber's Bay, January 17th, 1901. Only one life was lost, and much gear was subsequently saved.

2. The Viper, torpedo-boat destroyer, fitted with Parson's steam turbines, which on August 3rd, 1901, ran on a rock off Alderney in a dense fog whilst engaged in the manoeuvres. No lives lost.

3. The Cobra, torpedo-boat destroyer, also fitted with Parson's turbines. All will remember how, on September 18th, 1901, this vessel, labouring in a rough sea near the Dorset Coast, broke her back and foundered, with a loss of 67 lives. Of that number 44 were officers and men of the Royal Navy; the rest were in the employ of the contractors.

4. The Active, coastguard sailing cruiser which was driven ashore at Granton Breakwater by the heavy gale of November 12th, 1901.
Twenty of her crew were lost with her.

5. The Flova, also a coastguard sailing cruiser, was driven ashore at Kingston-by-the-same gale, but without loss of life.

6. The Condor, slop, foundered with all hands when on a passage from Esquimaux to Honolulu. It is nearly certain that she was lost on or about December 3rd, 1901, at the very outset of her voyage. On March 17th, 1902, all hope was abandoned, and her books were closed.

China lost, on June 22nd this year, the third-class cruiser Kai-Chi, which was blown up in the Yangtze, near Nanking. Of a complement of about 150 only two were saved.

Denmark has lost the gunboat Afion, which was sunk off Copenhagen on September 3th, 1901, by a gunnery accident. No one was on board at the time, as she was engaged on a dangerous experiment.

The Royal Niger Company has lost the Empire, a river gunboat, employed in the Niger. She ran aground in February, 1902, and could not be refloated. No lives were lost.

France has lost two torpedo-boats, viz.:
1. No. 91, which ran on a rock on March 12th, 1901, and sank in deep water. The crew was saved.

2. No. 124, which was lost by collision during the manoeuvres off the Corsica coast, on September 17th, 1901. No lives were lost.

Germany has lost—1. The small cruiser Wacht which was lost by collision off Arkona on November 4th, 1901.
The crew was saved.

2. Torpedo-boat No. 12, lost recently, on June 24th, 1902, off the mouth of the Elbe, by collision with a British steamer. Four lives were lost.

3. Torpedo-boat No. 76, which was lost, also by collision, in August, 1901. One life was lost.

Japan has lost one torpedo-boat, which was sunk in a collision off Tsushima on June 25th, 1901, during the manoeuvres.

Russia has lost only the cruiser Vitia, which was burnt on her slip at St. Petersburg on June 14th, 1901. The hull was not nearly so absolute that no attempt could be made to proceed with her construction.

Spain has lost the small gunboat Condor, which was destroyed off Vigo by a boiler explosion on January 24th, 1902. Three lives were lost.

It will be noticed that the losses in the British Navy are all due to stress of weather, while in the German Navy they are all due to collisions.
Not that British ships have been free from collisions; but they happily seem to have developed the power of minimizing the effects, as witness the saving of the Salmon, which was nearly cut in two. On the other hand, the German Navy has had at least one bad ground-
